If we knew the clouds above us, Held by gentle blessings there, Would we turn oway all trembling, In our blind and weak despair? Would we shrink from little shadows, Lying on the dewy grass, While 'tis only birds of Eden, Just in mercy flying past?

If we knew the silent story,

Quivering through the heart of pain,
Would our womanhood dare doom them
Back to haunts of guilt again?

Life hath many a taugled crossing,
Joy hath many a break of woe;

And the checks, tear-washed, are whitest,
This the blessed angels know.

Let us reach into our bosoms
For the key to other lives,
And with love toward erring nature,
Cherish good that still survives;
So that when our disrobed spirits
Soar to realms of light again,
We may say, dear Father, judge us
As we judge our fellow men.

"Balnbow" Underclothes.

A silken rainbow of women's underclothes has suddenly appeared in the heavens of fashion, dazzling the gaze of wondering beholders, and giving promise of the Lord knows what next. I have heretofore in these letters written of changeful styles in undergarments, but never of anything like what I am now going to tell about. What do you think of a damsel arrayed in chemise and drawers of pale blue silk? That is what we have come to. we have come to.

These new garments, however, are not all blue; they range through various fashionable colors, though always in the light and delicate shades. They are not knit goods, understand, but are cut out of the same sorts of silk that are used for evening decays. of the same sorts of silk that are used for evening dresses. Soft Surah silk is often employed for the purpose. There is a lavish trimming of white lace, too, and the shapes are in jaunty keeping with the ravishing nature of these peculiar articles of hidden dress. One suit, for example, was of so light a plak that it might easily match the fair skin of the wearer. The chemise was cut rather in a heart shape at the breast, and was entirely sleeveless. The opening was edged

Some enthusiastic fashion writers are predicting a revolution in underwear. The rage for silk material dees not point that way, in my opinion. They say that combination garments of different kinds are to take the place of chemise, drawers, corset covers, petticoats and short petticoats. This may possibly come in the course of time, but the progress is not rapid at present. The combined chemise and skirt, fitting the figure by means of darks and side forms, is appropriate and comfortable. With embroidery and lace at hand, there need be no lack of beauty or fine finish. They are well suited to silk, forming in that material a charming jaunty affair. All of the new designs for combination are fastened in front, the combination petticoat having either one combination are fastened in front, the combination patticoat having either one full fleunce at the back, or several, to give a better outline to the costume. A combination to give a short under petticoat contests of a corset cover and an abbreviated skirt, the former having an extra dart underneath the arms, and buttons around the waist line, on which to suspend the upper skirt. Dressy yokes are made of hemstitched tucking and fine Terchon, Valenciennes or Italian lace.

is indicated by the greatly increased richness of women's underwear. Formerly, the care bestowed in this matter reached only to nestness—sometimes to embroidery—but hardly ever to the substitutic; of costlier material than cotton. The slik chemises mentioned come at $15 to $40 per half dozen. As they are worn next the skin, it follows that they are soon soiled. They cannot be washed, and if ever used a second time must be cleansed by a professional dyer, whose charges are high. The extravagance of such articles, therefore, amounts to a wanton waste of money. A belle may feel good with Surah silk next to her skin as she parades down Broadway, but the spectator can't distinguish her from other girls whose bodies are incased in common fabric. Some have an ambition to possess a great number of silk chemical and the state of the state of silk chemical and the state of the state of the same and the state of THE PLENTIFULNESS OF MONEY sekin as abo parades down Braideny, but the speciator can't distinguish har from other girls whose bodies are incased in common fabric. Some have an ambition to possess a great number of silk chemises, each different from all, the rest in color and trimming. Some of these collections do their owners very proud indeed, and are abown to friends about as the autograph book and constrate of the jewel-box are displayed. Conversations like this occur on the street:

"What's your chemise, to day, my dear?"

"Cardinal. What's your?"

"Amethyst, with the ruffle and Torchon."

suit of the season. Solid dark colors are most liked for these; next come small checks and invisible plaids. The band-kerchiefs and large plaids are not taken up as eagerly as was expected. The latest style for making the latter has a straight, round skirt, with a plaiting at the foot, and a cluster of old-fashioned tacks from an ipoh and a half to two inches above it. The facket is tight-fitting, and has no trimming beyond collar, cuffs and pocket-flaps of velvet or plush.

TOLLY'S FURNITURE STORE! A DINNER DRESS MADE FOR MISS ASTOR,

the youngest daughter of William B. Astor, has been pictured in the fashion plates as a model. It is of black satin, with panels of white satin, painted by hand with birds and flowers in natural with panels of white satin, painted by hand with birds and flowers in natural colors. The train is bordered with black silk plaitings, while the front of the skirt is edged with colored plaitings, the bottom one blue, the middle chamois, and the top one rose. The bodice forms a little basque behind, and is cut off obliquely in front. A sapphire blue scarf of satin is cut straight, but is folded narrower at the top than where it reaches its greatest depth on the opposite side of the front. Two white satin panels, beautifully painted, open below the sepr, and the space between is filled by a double jabot of white lace. The corsage is cut in an open square at the throat, and is trimmed with a Directorie layer of painted white satin, beneath which is a fichuscarf of white lace, arranged with unequal ends. The elbow sleeves have painted satin cuffs, bows of sapphire satin, and two frills of white lace. In the neck is a full ruche of crepe lisse. The distinctive feature of this beautiful dress is the painting, which is not at all ordinary workmanship, but is done in a thoroughly artistic manner. The pictures are well worth framing as works of intrinsic merit. What will become of them after the dress has been worn at one dinner party, and then possibly once or twice at the opera? Miss Astor, you must know, would not condescend to wear the same dress, however elaborate and costly, on many successive occasions. the same dress, however elaborate and costly, on many successive occasions.-CLARA BELLE, in Cincinnati Enquirer.

The twenty-mile equestriende race becample, was of 'so light a pluk that it might easily match the flair skin of the wearer. The chemise was cut rather in a heart shape at the breast, and was entirely sleeveless. The opening was edged with narrow lace, as were the arm holes, and on top of each shoulder was a flat burch hole. Otherwise it was perfectly plain, except for an edging of lace at the bottom. It was half-fitted to the form and quite short. Some of these undersuits are in demure drabs, with needlework of the same color, and at the other extreme are such flaming shirts as would doom a wearer to instant death if she should walk out in her sleep and meet a bull. As a rule, however, the light tints of blue, purple, pink and orange are chosen; the blues and pinks being considered becoming to blondes and the purples and oranges for brunettes. How extensively these dainty underclothes are worn its impossible to tell. That is obvious. But the displays in several stores are large and varied, and the eales are quite heavy.

Some enthusiastic fashien writers are predicting a revolution in underwear. The rage for silk material does not point that way, in my opinion. They say that combination garments of different kinds are to take the place of chemise, drawers, corset covers, petticoats and short pettic. contest, and the remainder of the race was apparently going to be very close, but Miss Pinneo got a bad horse for the fifteenth mile and it ran backwards, sideways and every way but straight ahead, while Miss Jewett's was going like the wind. Then Miss Pinneo rode to the Judge's stand and said, "I will not ride against a two-mile horse; it is contrary to agreement." No amount of entreaty would induce her to go ahead, so Miss Jewett rode out the remaining six heats, making ther twenty miles in 59 minutes and 20 seconds, and winning the purse of $2,500. Miss Pinneo rode back and forth in front of the grand stand until her rival had received the compliment of the Judges, but entered no protest. It is Judges, but entered no protest. It is said that she cried at her failure.—Chicago Times.

> KEEP IT TO YOURSELF.—You have trouble—your feelings are injured, your husband is unkind, your wife frets, your home is not pleasant, your friends do not treat you fairly; and things in general move unpleasantly. Well, what of it? Keep it to yourself. A smouldering fire can be found and extinguished; but when the coals are scattered, who can pick them up? Bury your sorrow. The place for sad and disgusting things is under the ground. A cut finger is not benefitted by pulling off the plaster and exposing it under somebody's eyes. Tie it up and let it alone. It will get well sooner than you can cure it. Charity covereth a multitude of sins. Things thus covered are often cured without a covereth a multitude of sins. Things thus covered are often cured without a scar; but once published and confined to meddling friends, there is no end to the trouble they may cause. Keep it to yourself. Troubles are transient, and when a sorrow is healed and past, what a comfort it is to say, "No one ever knew it until the trouble was all over."

Good Reasons for the Doctor's Faith. Good Reasons for the Doctor's Faith.

We have for twelve months been prescribing S.
S.S. ("Swift's Syphilitic Specific") in the treatment of Syphilis and many other discases for which it is recommended, and are frank to say, that the results have been most satisfactory, not having been disappointed in a single instance. We think, for all the diseases for which it is recommended, it stands without a peer, and that the medical profession will, sooner or later, be forced to acknowledge it in the treatment of Syphilis, in all stages as a sine qua non.

STAR CURINE

Is an external remedy; by applying it on the out side and taking Smith's Scrotula Syrup, your case will be easy to cure. If you will call on or address us we will take pleasure in showing you hundreds of certificates from parties living in thir State that you are well acquainted with, that have been cured sound and well by using Star Curine and Smith's Scrofula Syrup. If you are afflicted with any of the above mentioned diseases do not think your case will get well without treatment. Do not dolay. The sooner you get to using our two remedies, the sooner you will be restored to health and happiness.
